

1st Virtual Conference of the European Society for Neurochemistry “Future perspectives for European neurochemistry – a young scientist’s conference”

When you are upset about something, like we are about the fact that we had to postpone our biennial meeting in St. Petersburg, there are usually two ways to deal with it: to stay upset but find a way out of it and do something else or just continue to be upset. As scientists, we are very much used to setbacks and therefore we are capable of finding a way out. Our coming together in person will be taking place in 2022, but until then we invite you to join us virtually and discuss neurochemistry, hear about new techniques, new results and, most importantly, give a stage to early career scientists. This is what the first virtual ESN conference will be about!

Organised by the ESN-Young Scientist Steering Committee (ESN-YSSC) under the auspices of the ESN Council, it will be open to all ESN members as well as to non- or not-yet members of ESN, junior and senior scientists from all areas of neurochemistry. BUT: This is not a substitute or an online version of the ESN Biennial Meeting - this will be held in Saint Petersburg, Russia in May 2022. All Session chairs, speakers (apart from 2 keynote speakers) and poster presenters will be PhD students and early-career Postdocs. This is different and new, and we invite you to send in your proposals to build the program up! The ESN-YSSC represents the young scientist community and we want to provide a stage for young people to present themselves, their work and especially to organise a symposium or propose a workshop without directly competing with more established scientists in their field.
